KATHERINE BATES RUIZ '96

Katherine and her husband, Marco Ruiz, would like to announce the birth of Alexander Ruiz on January 19th, and they hope to take him to Sterling for a visit one of these days!

SARAH MORIN ALEXANDER '97

After several years of darkness, Sarah has regained her center and refocused her path. She is divorced, working part time, and recently enrolled in graduate school at Husson University in Bangor, Maine. She is enrolled in the Clinical Mental Health Counseling Program, and is approaching contentment in her life. Her daughters are now 5, 7, and 9 years old, and they are the loves of her life!

continues steadily, with articles on hunting and fishing showing up in a range of magazines, journals, and essay contributions to books. More to see at reidbryant.com. Their children, Nell Harper and Willa Wren, are 7 and 9 respectively, both freckly and beautiful. Kim has emerged as a superlative fly angler, and has been featured in two recent issues of Field & Stream magazine. She will likely be working at the Orvis Flyfishing Schools. All are well and happy, and they spend some quality time with Uncle Matt Breuer '00 when possible.

BILL DALLMEYER '05

Bill joined Sterling's global field studies course: James Bay Resource Management as a Teaching Assistant this past fall. This course has been led by faculty member, Jeff Parsons, for many years and introduces students to the complex ecology and human community of the James Bay region of central Quebec. Bill and Jeff pose for a picture with Freddy Jolly, a Nemaska Cree trapper. Freddy has been vital in connecting Sterling to the Cree community and has hosted two Sterling interns.

MELISSA HOOKE '00

Melissa is working for the State Library of Florida Bureau of Library Development doing webinar production/tech support and social media. Her hubby is a Botanist/Ecologist for the State Natural Heritage Program. She is about to run her first marathon, she does a lot of trail running, and she rides horseback a couple days a week at least. Her and her husband are working on their house and biding their time until they can move back north.

RYUICHI "LOU" KUWAGAKI '00

Lou is currently an Assistant Professor of Nagoya University and travels to the Philippines with students on a trip called OFW (Overseas Field Work).

ADAM PICHE '00

Adam will be racing this summer in an adventure race called Death Race in Vermont, which is hosted by Spartan Race and Peak Races (youmaydie.com). It is a 48+ hour race that taxes you physically, as well as mentally. 90% of those who enter the race will not finish. There is no sleep, no aid station, no modern conveniences, and certainly no cheering crowd. Friends and family continuously ask him why he would do something that sounds so awful. Death Race to him and why he wants to participate is not about him versus the other participants - it's about Adam versus Adam. It's about accomplishing a goal that was set and not quitting until the goal is attained.

ASA TWOMBLY '02

Asa has been continuing his work in the public school system working with IEP students. He is starting work towards a MS in psychology/counseling with a focus on child and adolescent development to allow for advancement in this field. Speaking of fields, farming has proven to be a challenging endeavor. Their small four-acre plot flooded once with Irene and again the following spring after the farm had been—thanks to a totally awesome and supportive community—completely resurrected and replanted. Luckily they don't own the land, so losses were minimal. Buddhist farming does teach impermanence. He spent a month or so on Maui this winter (highly recommended), but returned in time for prime back-country powder skiing! His wonderful children are happy and healthy. His chickens are fine after a big transition and impressive skunk pressure.

KIM McINTYRE '04

Kim is one month away from marrying Liz Ludwig. Her part-time work of starting a custom furniture business keeps her busy. She loved getting out for a few cross-country skis this winter. She is sending lots of warm love to her Sterling community.
